COUNCIL TAKES BIDS ON LIFT STATIONS

Not Hesitate To Use A-Weapons

By CHARLES W. CARDRY
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration was on the record today with a blunt new assertion that America would not hesitate to use atomic weapons even in a small war if military circumstances required them.

This latest effort to build up the "credibility" of U. S. nuclear weapons was not forth by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara in his marathon testimony Friday before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

A member of that committee, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, lashed out at administration emphasis on non-nuclear forces in a Senate speech last September. She contended Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's "truce" stemmed from his "confidence" that America would not use its decided nuclear advantage, "for he sees us turning to emphasis on conventional weapons."

Others voice concern.

Similar concern was voiced in Europe and in some U. S. military quarters.

The secretary told the committee, however, that rapid buildup of U. S. conventional forces "has done much to stabilize the Berlin situation." He warned cold war crises might "occur frequently in the years ahead" in Berlin, Viet Nam, Laos, Cuba or elsewhere "in areas of serious instability."

In his 112-page rundown on the Kennedy administration's new defense plans and record $48.3 billion spending proposals, McNamara said both America and its NATO Allies must give greater emphasis to non-nuclear forces.

But he promptly added, "This does not mean that we would hesitate to use nuclear weapons even in a limited war situation, if needed."

He recalled making a similar statement to the committee last spring. It went largely unnoticed, however, in the context of administration concern for a conventional force expansion.

It is "still our policy" to increase non-nuclear capabilities, he said Friday, but that does not reverse national policy on nuclear weapons. That policy, under the Eisenhower administration, was to place main but not sole reliance on atomic arms.

Wide Ranging Testimony

McNamara's testimony covered the gamut of U. S. military affairs down to small details customarily left to lower-ranking experts. Committee members praised McNamara and said they were impressed with the secretary's knowledge of his department.

In one controversial area, that of the future of the reserve forces, he provoked no criticism as far as word from the closed-door session indicated. But he surely lit a fuse that will set off a noise later.

McNamara revealed his intention to slash the number of paid reservists by 32,000, cutting them down to 973,000, while increasing

Chumbler Sets Record But Lowes Loses

Billy Chumbler who missed setting a tournament record at the Louisville Invitational meet Thursday with a sparkling 37 point production, three shy of a record, went over the top last night with 42 points. But it wasn't enough.

Lowes was eliminated from the classic by Louisville Central 87-78. The Blue Devils were in quest of their 22nd victory without a loss. Lowes had to come from behind Thursday, down DeSales but could not turn the trick for the second time in a row.

Central grasped a 20-17 first period lead and held on in a close second quarter to carry a 38-36 edge to the dressing room at halftime.

The upstate club began pulling away in the third frame and Lowes only managed to trim the deficit to nine points before the contest ended.

Watkins led a four man scoring attack for Central with 20 points. Winn added 15 to the Blue Devil cause.

Other action found St. Xavier downing Waggener 69-62, and Shawnee tripping Hazard 79-70. Male plays Central and Shawnee plays St. Xavier in the semi-finals today.

The program will be the "Language Lab at Work." Mrs. Lillian Lowry will have charge of the program.

Shot At Moon Is On Again

By ALVIN B. WEBB JR.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — An "off-again-on-again" U. S. shot at the moon is back on the firing schedule for next week, but it is a scientific loneshot.

After first calling off the launching, indefinitely, scientists did an about-face Friday night and decided they still had a chance to rocket a camera-carrying Ranger-3 capsule to the moon next Friday or Saturday.

But the chances that it would come off next week were described alternately by scientists as "slim" and "remote" and "not very optimistic."

Original plans to fire the 727-pound Ranger-3 spacecraft 240,000 miles across space Monday were blocked Friday by rocket troubles that were described as "pretty serious."

Sources said the difficulties cropped up in a fueling test of the giant boosted section of the 10-story Atlas-Agena rocket. The second stage and its delicate payload were removed immediately so technicians could set to work correcting the problems.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration NASA first called, an "indefinite" postponement. Later, NASA reserved space on the Atlantic missile range firing schedule for a possible shot Friday or Saturday.

Thus Ranger-3 would follow two other major U. S. space efforts for next week: the orbital flight of astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. set for Wednesday, and the Navy's plans to send five satellites into orbit aboard a single rocket Thursday.

Preparations for the Glenn flight and the five-one satellite shot were reported "proceeding on schedule" late Friday.

Ranger-3 will attempt to take close-up pictures of the moon, and then send a rugged 96½-pound ball of instruments to a "crash landing" on the lunar surface.

TVA Retailers Set Record In Distribution Of Electricity

New records were set in the distribution of low-cost electricity in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1961, by the 102 municipal electric systems and the 51 rural electric cooperatives that retail power purchased at wholesale from the Tennessee Valley Authority.

According to the annual report, released by TVA today, covering the operations of the local power systems their total sales approached 20 billion kilowatt-hours, 2½ times the total only a decade ago. Revenues reached $191.1 million, up $10.2 million over last year.

The report lists expenses at $166.7 million, an increase of $10.9 million, and combined net income at $24.4 million.

In the centennial year of the birth of the late Senator George W. Norris, the report pays tribute to his dedication to the establishment of TVA and his fight for the development of low-cost power.

"In F.Y. 1961 the benefits of low-cost power which George Norris envisioned stood out clearly in the operations of the 153 municipal and cooperative distributors of TVA power," the report states.

Average residential use grew to 9,135 kilowatt-hours, well over twice the national average. The average charge to residential customers declined to only 0.98 cent a kilowatt-hour compared with the national average of 2.46 cents. Total residential sales were 11.6 billion kilowatt-hours as compared with only 3.4 billion kWh 10 years ago.

The distributors' low rates were saving their 1,450,000 customers $128 million annually compared with the average rates prevailing in the Nation.

State and local taxes and tax equivalents paid by the distributors totaled $10,876,000, an increase of $836,000 for the year. In addition, TVA itself paid $6,479,000 of tax equivalents to states and local governments, of which $4,331,000 related to the sale of power to the local distributors. Thus, $15,207,000, or 8.1 per cent, of the revenue from the distributors' customers went ultimately for state and local taxes.

Industrialization in the region made substantial progress in the face of a general economic recession. The report lists a total of thirty-five new plants or plant expansions, each involving an investment of at least a million dollars, completed or under construction during the year.

Although industrial development proceeded at a good pace, some of the larger industries served by the distributors, feeling the effects of the recession, reduced their power purchases. Total industrial and commercial sales were 7.9 billion kilowatt-hours, about 3 per cent more than the previous record, established last year; revenue from these sales was $70.6 million.

During the year, Monticello, Kentucky, became a municipal distributor of TVA power. Several other municipalities specifically exempted from the limitation in the 1959 TVA bond financing legislation made progress toward receiving TVA power. One, Paducah, Kentucky, acquired its distribution system shortly after the end of the year and will begin distributing TVA power on January 1, 1963.

The continuing high level of earnings permitted nine of the distributors to make rate reductions, which will save their consumers more than $400,000 their first year in effect. At the end of 1961, 10 distributors, which had been operating under TVA rates, were applying rates below the original TVA rates. A fourth retail rate schedule, named the Norris Centennial Series in honor of Senator Norris, was made available to the distributors shortly after the end of the year. It is about 5 per cent below the lowest of the three retail schedules previously available. Three distributors — two municipalities and a cooperative — have adopted the new rates.

Expanding their systems to supply

Two Trucks Also Purchased; Mayor Pro-tem Vaughn Presides

Mayor Pro-tem Leonard Vaughn presided over the regular meeting of the Murray City Council last night in the absence of Mayor Holmes Ellis. Three councilmen were also absent last night, Richard Tuck, Charles Mason Baker and Prentice Lassiter.

Several items of business were accomplished in the relatively short session.

A one-half ton pickup truck was purchased for the Sanitation System and a three-quarter ton pickup truck was purchased for the Murray Water and Sewer system.

Parker Motors was low bidder for each of the trucks.

For the one-half ton truck the bids were as follows: Parker Motors $1584.50, Holcomb Chevrolet $1704.97 and Taylor Motors $1599.97. All of the bids were plus tax.

For the three-quarter ton truck the bids were as follows: Holcomb Chevrolet $1535.00 with the trade-in of a 1956 Dodge truck, Taylor Motors Dodge $1638.40 with trade-in, Parker Motors $1158.72 with trade-in, and Taylor Motors, International $1239.36, with trade-in.

The half-ton truck will be used by Rex Billington of the Sanitation System. At the present time the city is saving about $50 per month for private use of two employees in the system. This will eliminate this monthly expense.

The Murray Natural Gas System will purchase a carload of pipe at a saving of about $200.

The council discussed several items of business in relation to the Murray Water and Sewer System. Superintendent Rob Huie was authorized to make application for the $73,000 recently granted the system from the Federal Government. The government will pay thirty per cent of the cost of certain portions of the new sewer expansion which has to do with possible pollution of the Clarks River. This includes lift stations, and major truck lines.

The total cost of this aspect of the expansion is about $210,000 of which the government will pay $73,000.

The council approved the motion that Huie be authorized to sign permits with property owners where sewer lines are to be laid and specifically with the L & N Railroad where the lines run along the railroad tracks.

The house which was constructed for the caretaker of the water pumps is almost complete. It is located near the Water System property south of East Elm street.

Councilman Joe Dick read bids on two proposed lift stations which must be constructed in connection with the sewer expansion project. The Cannellon Pipe Company of Cannellon, Indiana was low bidder. The bid on the Hazel highway lift station was $10,720 and the bid on the Five Points lift station was $9,446. About $50 separated the low bid and the next highest bid.

Councilman James R. Albritten urged that Fire Chief Frank Robertson be allowed to attend the annual fire school in Memphis, Tennessee on February 28, 29 and March 1 with an allowance of $40.00. This was approved.

Councilman Frank Lancaster announced that he had attended his final meeting of the Murray Power Board. He praised the present board and said that the operation of the Murray Electric System was in excellent hands and that a sound program was in force. He reported that the street light program would get underway soon.

Charles Ryan was a visitor at the meeting.

Rev. Whitmer Will Speak, Martin Chapel

Rev. Joseph Whitmer will preach at Martin Chapel Methodist Church Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock worship hour. Rev. Whitmer is the District Minister to the Christian Churches of Western Kentucky and is campus minister to the youth attending Murray State College.

He is to speak on the subject, "Radical Change." As a former missionary to the Congo and to Jamaica, Rev. Whitmer is well qualified to preach on the subjects dealing with missions. Rev. Mr. Whitmer and his family served in the Congo from 1943 to 1958.

Officers For Debate Team Are Elected

School debate team met on Wednesday and named the following officers: president, Randy Patterson, vice-president, Charles H. Paschall, secretary-treasurer, Dan McDaniel, and reporter, Kea C. Limes.

Charles Outland became a member this month. The team was recently made an affiliate member of the National Forensic League and will receive their charter soon.

Thursday afternoon Calloway defeated North Marshall in two debates. Those debating were Randy Patterson, Dan McDaniel, Charles Fennell and Ken Limes.

Christopher Kiwanian Man Of The Year; Darnall President

Maurice P. Christopher, was named "Kiwanian of the Year 1961" during a recent meeting of the Murray Kiwanis Club. The announcement and plaque presentation was made by Kiwanian Hunter Hancock.

Christopher, professor of chemistry at Murray State College, was elected to serve as the club's first president after heading an organizational drive to obtain a charter for the Murray Kiwanis Club in April, 1961. Christopher furnished the leadership and inspiration to give Murray's youngest civic club a firm foundation on which to build for the future.

Dr. Harry Sparks, Head of the Department of Education, Murray State College, was the featured speaker of the evening. The meeting also served as the annual Ladies Night for the Murray Kiwanis Club.

Myrtis Mohler, Benton, Kentucky, Lieutenant Governor of the Kiwanis First District, was present to install the following officers for the year 1962: Josiah Darnall, President; R. Y. Northen, Vice-President; Zane Cunningham, Treasurer; Charles Coleman, Secretary. Chairmen of Kiwanis Committees for 1962 are as follows: Boys and Girls Work—James Armstrong; Key Clubs—Paul Sturm; Vocational Guidance—Paul Lynn; Agriculture and Conservation—Archie Scott; Public and Business Affairs—Bob Billington; Support of Churches—C. W. Jones; Attendance and Membership—Charles Hale; Finance—Hunter Hancock; House—Bob Jones; Inter-Club Relations—Bob Jones; Public Relations—Bob Jones.

Members of the 1962 Board of Directors for the Murray Kiwanis Club were announced as follows: Marvin Wrenthall, Bill Boyd, Bob Billington, Hunter Hancock, Archie Scott, Charles Hale, Charles Reidlinger and Paul Sturm.

The Murray Kiwanis Club meets each Thursday at six-thirty p. m. at the Murray Woman's Club House.

WHOSE SIDE ARE WE ON?

SECRETARY OF STATE DEAN RUSK says the Congo situation is "greatly improved," now that opponents of United Nations forces are divided, but since both sides are fighting it is difficult to understand what he means.

There has been strong opposition to this country helping force the surrender of Katanga Province by financing the United Nations invasion because many of our people feel a coalition government means a victory for International Communism.

The Kennedy Administration seems to feel otherwise, and the President will ask Congress to buy United Nations bonds in the sum of one hundred million dollars to finance the invasion.

It seems U.N. has finally come to terms with Tshombe, but the new Communist agitator, Gizenga, is now trying to take over, so it seems, we still have the same sort of mixed-up mess on our hands that we got into in 1950 when we started a "police action" in Korea which is still in effect.

When we attempt to "neutralize" civil wars, whether they be in Cuba, Berlin or the Congo, there is one handicap we never seem to hurdle. It is the determination of the Communist bloc to keep up turmoil, banditry and confusion as a means of achieving its goal of dominating the world, and destroying human rights.

Thus, when our state department announces conditions in The Congo are "greatly improved" we believe we are justified in asking "For whom are they improved?"

BUSINESS VOLUME AND PROFIT

ECONOMISTS SEEM AGREED that the business outlook for 1962 is good. They all seem to think trade will increase, but they are uncertain about profits and some feel increasing costs will absorb all possible gains in volume.

We know little about foreign trade, except that most of us have believed in the Cordell Hull democratic tariff policy as opposed to Republican protectionism, but since the 1960 national campaign we have been somewhat confused about that.

Last week President Kennedy appealed to Congress to kill the reciprocal trade agreements under the Hull program, and to give him the power to cut tariffs to compete with the new European Common Market.

We are inclined to agree that proper steps should be taken immediately to better serve our customers providing reciprocal agreements could be reached for the protection of Southern farmers, but steps taken yesterday in cutting rates on several hundred manufactured items under powers already granted the President, without mention of cotton, tobacco, wheat or corn, makes us wonder.

Great Britain has always been our ally, but she has also been our stiffest competitor, and it appears the Common Market will make her still stronger. If we are ready for the Kefauver Atlantic Union government it may be wise for us to merge with our Mother Country, but we don't believe we are ready for that.

After listening to President Kennedy's State of the Union speech we believed the run on the dollar had ended, and that our Fort Knox gold supply was safe, but when the Associated Press Monday says "The United States balance of payments situation took a sharp and unexpected turn for the worse in the last quarter of 1961," it makes us wonder whether the Common Market is being created to help us or to take our most profitable markets away from us.

ply the sharp growth in power use accompanying the rapid development of the areas they serve, the distributors spent $31.7 million for new plant. Most of the funds needed to finance this expansion were generated internally—largely earnings and depreciation provisions; the remainder was provided by increasing their total long-term debt by $3.0 million to $29.1 million. The total assets of the distributors rose to $613.1 million.

Falcons Ease By Murray High 64-61

The Hickman County Falcons edged by host Murray High 64-61 last night on the strength of some good charity toss firing. The visitors got 36 attempts at the foul line and connected on 28 to snare the victory even though they were out-scored from the field by five baskets.

A low scoring first quarter found the two clubs deadlocked 10-10. Hickman managed to take a three point advantage, 30-27, in the second quarter as the half came to a close. Murray trailed by nine at the end of three quarters but was able to cut the gap to three before the final horn sounded.

Tonny Wells scored 16 points to lead a three man attack for the Tigers. Richard Hurt was right behind him with 14 points and Blackburn added 10.

Hickman put five men into double figure scoring with Gary Myers pointing the way with 15 points. Hickman 10 20 50 64 Murray 10 27 41 61

Sports Parade

By OSCAR FRALEY

MIAMI UP — Gene Tunney as a boxer and Rocky Marciano as a puncher were the greatest heavy-weight champions since Jack Dempsey. All The Vest We'll said today, and a Dempsey-Marciano bout would have been "the greatest fight of all time."

Throw those two great punchers in together. We'll mused, his blue eyes lighting up, "and you'd have really seen some fireworks. It would have been Murder Incorporated."

We'll should know, having been associated briefly with Dempsey in the Manassas Mauler's early days and being the man who managed Marciano to the heavyweight title and a record of 49 fights without defeat.

"The Vest," so called because he once displayed a passionate predilection for gaudy waistcoats, has difficulty generating enthusiasm these days after a nine-month illness with a kidney ailment. He underwent eight blood transfusions and, after almost a year on the boxing sidelines, at 68 finally has come back to where he once again is itching to manage or promote.

One of Four Marciano was only one of Weill's champions. Al also piloted Joey Archibald to the feather-weight title, Lou Ambers to the light-weight crown and Marty Servo to the welterweight championship. "Ambers was the best," he insists. "He was tops in principles as well as ability."

The portly, white-haired man with the horn-rimmed glasses may in this statement, be prejudiced by a coolness in his relations with Marciano. Rocky became increasingly assertive as he came down to the point of retirement and they are not particularly close even at this stage.

"We talk to each other," Weill hastens to interject. "He calls me up and so on. But he made a couple of pretty bad cracks about me. Rocky listened to too many fair weather friends. Club lawyers, I call 'em. I blame them for lookin' to get in with him. They've cost him a lot of money, too."

Must Have Help "Understand," he added, "I'm not knockin' Marciano. It's just that those fair weather friends told him he did it all by himself. Now you gotta have everything to win 49 without defeat. But you got to have a lot of help from your manager, too."

There are, Weill claims, those psychological moments when a needle from the manager is the difference.

"Like the night in Philadelphia we fight old Jersey Joe Walcott for the title," he said. "Look, I know we can't win the decision. Think what you want, but this is Walcott's home town. They're all for him. So when Rocky comes to the corner after the 12th round, I tell him 'You ain't gotta chance less you knock him out.' So Rocky goes out there the next round and hits him a right that puts Joe away and we win the title."

CHAPTER 33
AT Jessie Prewitt's table a waitress interrupted the cheerful conversation. "Excuse, Señora." She was speaking rapidly in Spanish, but her eyes, wide in her face, were fixed on Jessie. Ralph Stanton appeared to be so puzzled that even before he started to translate, Jessie experienced the first knots of worry. "She says there are two men to see you, Jess. Would you like me to find out what they want?" Jessie had already risen. "Something has happened to Dan," was her instant thought. About the said, "No thank you, I'll go. Where are they?" "In the lounge." Trying not to anticipate trouble, forcing herself to remain calm and walk slowly, Jessie left the dining room, climbed the few steps to the lounge, and as soon as she saw the men, the foreboding that had started at the table crystallized into certainty. The large man was very dark. In spite of his civilian clothes he was unmistakably a police man. The man with him was in uniform, a young man, rather handsome with swarthy skin and startlingly pale eyes. They were standing uncomfortably near the door. "Señora Prewitt?" It was the large man who spoke, his English very stilted and correct, with only a faint accent. "I am Inspector Menendez. This is my associate, Sergeant Roberto." The young man clicked his heels and bowed smartly. The inspector was opening the door. "If it is permitted, Señora, it would be more convenient to talk outdoors." Without will of her own Jessie proceeded then to the rustic chairs that were grouped on the terrace and sat down. "We are here," the inspector began, "at the request of the commandant of police." And Jessie, braced for bad news, had no way of knowing that the words were only partly true. Actually a combination of circumstances had led the inspector to stop at the Villa. The arrangements for the morning's raid were completed earlier than he had anticipated and Theresa, he knew, would still be waiting up for him. Also, at Sergeant Roberto's insistence, he had reread the police reports and, perhaps because the idea had been successfully planted, he wondered if there were not, after all, some connection between the events on the Plaza and the incident at the Morales home. It intrigued him to think how embarrassing an investigation would be to both the commandant and the mayor if the woman turned out to be a criminal. Sitting here, looking at her, it was hard to believe that this little woman with the big eyes and dignified manner could be involved in anything unsavory. But as the inspector knew, criminals come in all shapes and sizes. "Tell me, Señora, about your car. Were you able to replace the tires?" Jessie smiled with relief. "Oh," she said. "It's about the car." "Why yes, Señora," the large man answered blandly. "What did you think it was about?" "For a moment... I thought... perhaps something had happened to Dan... my husband," she explained. "I'm sorry if we alarmed you. No, it's not about your husband. We are concerned about what happened last night. It must have been a frightening experience following so quickly after the theft of your purse." "It was," Jessie agreed. "I'll admit that I was pretty shaken up. It was a small boy who stole my purse. I saw him myself... But this other thing... not knowing who did it. It's true, it scared me." Fragments of the experience returned to trouble her, the odd feeling that she was being threatened for reasons she didn't understand. Her perplexity showed plainly in her face. "And now, Señora, you are no longer frightened?" "No, I realize it could happen to anyone, anywhere. I just was unlucky, I guess. My car was in the wrong place at the wrong time." "There isn't any reason then why anyone would want to harm you?" The inspector was leaning forward, carefully studying her face. "No reason at all." The question was obviously unexpected. The door to the lounge opened and one of the maid's came but onto the terrace bringing them a tray of coffee and pastry. While she served them there was a static silence in which all the frightening implications of the inspector's questions seemed to gather form and substance in the night. They peered at Jessie from the blackness of the garden while she, who picked up her chin with stiff fingers. "Very kind of the Señora Alexander." The inspector's polite comment reduced everything to a commonplace. "These cakes are delicious. The sergeant and I haven't eaten yet." The sergeant nodded as though he understood what was being said but was unable to answer. Not until the maid had left the terrace did the inspector say anything of importance, and when he did return to the subject, it seemed at first as if his mind had veered off in another direction. "You know, Señora, coincidence is a word that a good policeman does not use lightly. Has it occurred to you that the damage to your car was not merely the result of accidental selection?" "But that's ridiculous." "Is it?" He took out a package of cigarettes, gave Jessie one and elaborately lighted it for her. "Tell me, Señora, are you carrying a great deal of money?" Jessie smiled wryly. "Scarcely four hundred dollars - barely enough to stay in Mexico a few days and get back home." The sergeant interpolated something in Spanish. The inspector nodded and said, "Sergeant Roberto says, and it's true, four hundred dollars is a huge sum of money to most of our people." "Oh, but you don't understand. No one else can use it. It's in traveler's checks." The inspector nodded solemnly as if he agreed that that was the only way to carry money. "And you have nothing else valuable? Jewelry, for instance?" "Only my rings—they're not really valuable." There was a subtle change in the inspector's voice. "No one would snatch your purse for your rings, Señora." "Inspector, I don't know what you're getting at." She was more angry than confused now. She had detected a veiled insinuation and, although she didn't understand its meaning, reacted against it. "Are you accusing me of something?" She could not see the inspector's hands, but she had the impression that he had turned then, pair up, much as a magician does to prove that he is concealing nothing. The expression on his face did not change, only his eyes seemed a little more penetrating. "Señora, I'm simply searching for possible threads between these incidents. There may be some connection. There may be some connection. There may be some connection. But I would be derelict in my duty if I did not try to discover them." "She thought only of the need to escape, scratching at the hands—that held her, trying to tear them away..." The story continues tomorrow.

Ferguson-Robbins Vows Read Recently In Church Ceremony

Miss Carolyn Jean Ferguson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Ferguson of Murray, became the bride of John E. Robbins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theron Robbins of Puryear, Tenn.

The double ring ceremony was read by Rev. John Hunt at the First Methodist Church in Shawneetown, Ill., on December 18. The church altar was decorated with poinsettias, white lilies, and green ferns.

Records of the traditional wedding marches were used for the professional and the recessional.

The bride wore a lovely wedding dress of white nylon organza over taffeta and a corsage of large pink carnations with pale blue trim. Her jewelry was a strand of pearls and pearl earrings.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Pridemore, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Ferguson, and Mrs. Bobby Ferguson attended the couple.

Mrs. Pridemore wore a green knit suit with white and black accessories and Mrs. Ferguson wore a navy blue dress with pink accessories.

The bridal couple spent their "honeymoon" at Paris Landing State Park and are now residing in Chicago, Ill.

Always in Good Taste

CREAM'S POURED OVER a portion of an old American dessert favorite. You can bet he won't be a slouch in helping himself to another portion of this delicious Apple Slump!

"A" Is For Apple And For Two Desserts That Are Traditional American Favorites

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

HERE'S an old Maine legend that Eve made the first Apple Pan Dowdy and that Adam fell for it. Could be, for this hearty dessert is a long-time favorite. In New England, Pan Dowdy and its cousin, Apple Slump, can be traced back to the early 1800's.

Many Variations
There's no "one" recipe for either traditional treat because, over the years, good cooks have improvised on the basic "pudding-pie" theme of these desserts. But whatever the recipe, Apple Pan Dowdy and Apple Slump are always in good taste. We think you'll agree when you try the recipes given here. They offer modern, time-saving ways of preparing them, using processed apples. Today's Pan Dowdy is made with canned apple slices, while Slump features canned apple sauce.

APPLE PAN DOWDY

1½ c. sifted all-purpose flour
3 tsp. baking powder
2 tsp. sugar
¼ tsp. salt
½ c. shortening
½ c. (1 can) sliced apples
¼ c. molasses
¼ c. sugar

1½ tsp. nutmeg
1½ tsp. cinnamon
2 tsp. butter
Combine flour, baking powder, sugar, and cinnamon. Cut in shortening with 2 knives or pastry blender. Add milk slowly, using just enough to hold ingredients together.

Roll out into 12-in. square. Lay in 9-in. pie plate. Place apples on top; add molasses, sugar, nutmeg and cinnamon. Dot with butter. Fold ends over apples.

Bake at 400° F. for 30 min. Serves 6.

APPLE SLUMP
4 c. canned apple sauce
½ c. light brown sugar
¼ c. molasses
½ tsp. nutmeg
2 c. biscuit mix
2 tsp. sugar
¼ c. shortening
½ to ¾ c. milk
Light cream

Simmer apple sauce in saucepan 15 min. to evaporate some of liquid. Add brown sugar, molasses, cinnamon, nutmeg, mix well.

Pour into 8x8x2-in. pan. Combine biscuit mix and sugar. Cut in shortening with pastry blender. Add milk slowly, using only enough to hold ingredients together.

Roll out on lightly floured board; cut into 16 (2 in.) biscuits. Place on top of apple sauce mixture.

Bake at 400° F. for 30 min. or until biscuits are brown. Serve with light cream. Serves 6 to 8.

PASTRY IS FOLDED over apples for a Pan Dowdy. To save preparation time, recipe is made with canned apples.
